thought, if the boat reached the shore, and she herself did not, that woman would be like a mother to her children, so she commenced throwing he smaller children into it, intending to keep the baby by her, because she could easier support it in the water than the others.

She had thrown two into the boat when to throw, but it was too late to throw so arg a one to the boat; accordingly she seized the baby and, supposing she had

Dr. Kane, the Heroic traveler, left He goes to recruit his health. The Puiladelphia Ledger says:

We saw him for a few moments yesterday, and he appeared but the shadow of a man. The severity of the summer to one who had lived for several years in a part of the globe where reigns perpetual ice, the effects of climate in that quarter, and an almost total change of made necessary by it, with the mental and physical labor rexuised for the publication of his narrative, have told upon a constitution apparently not very robust, and a visit to Europe, for the benefit of the baths of that country, is deemed desirable by his friends. We hope that they may bear healing medicine on their waters, and restore him to his country and his friends buoyant in health and strength, and ready for any service that his country or the claims of humanity may reque of him.

Lady Franklin, on hearing a rumor that Dr. Kane would leave for Europe, had a house furnished for his reception and waited in auxinus expectation the arrival of each steamer in the hope of meeting him.
